Editors' Notes

The illustrated list of rare Roman silver coins concludes the catalogue of the ancient coins in the J. Pierpont Morgan Collection. During 1951 we will catalogue the rare English coins and historical medals. If a demand exists at that time we will reprint the entire series as a separate pamphlet. Some fine coins still remain to be sold and if collectors will refer to the list numbers we will gladly quote prices.

During 1950 a number of new pages were added to the National Coin Album. Complete list may be obtained by writing to Mineola. Some new Popular Albums are also available. In spite of advancing costs our prices and standard of quality have been maintained.

Due to binding difficulties the 1951 Standard Catalogue of United States Coins has been delayed. It should be ready for distribution early in January. The advance sale is very heavy.

New Publications

Ainos—Its History and Coinage 474—341 B.C. By J. M. F. May. Oxford University Press. Price $5.00. Series—Oxford Classical and Philosophical Monographs.

A most interesting and readable monograph with ten double plates finely executed. The scientific arrangement of the coins is very clear and understandable.

Coin Collecting. By J. G. Milne, C. H. V. Sutherland and J. D. A. Thompson of the Coin Room, Ashmolean Museum, Oxford. Oxford University Press. $2.00.

In narrative as well as scientific form. Mostly concerned with Greek, Roman and English coins, 44 very fine plates. The general Collector should get much pleasure from reading this compact little work.

NUMISMATICA AMERICANA

JOHN J. FORD, JR.

Some months back, Oscar Schilke of Beacon Falls, Conn., the guiding light of the Naugatuck Valley Numismatic Association, caused some consternation and much discussion at the New York Numismatic Club. Oscar casually exhibited a Very Fine Half Dollar which closely resembled the style of the 1794 and 95 pieces. It bore a lettered edge, similar to our first Fifty Cent coins, and even possessed a little imitation mint lustre. Oscar broke up the complacent buzz so common at club meetings, by announcing the date of the Half Dollar in a rather loud voice. The coin was dated 1787.

Any collector, possessing the wisdom to invest a meager Three Dollars in the last edition of the Standard Catalog, would assuredly know that the first U.S. Half Dollar was struck in 1794.

When President Douglas announced a ten minute break, your correspondent almost climbed over the table to look at Oscar's "Unique" coin. I not only looked at it, I talked Mr. Schilke into permitting me to borrow it. Without his kind consent, this article would never have been written.

1787 HALF DOLLAR

Even a casual glance would impress upon the observer that the above coin did not originate at the U.S. Mint. Undoubtedly it was intended as a counterfeit, but because of the odd date, we must call it a fabrication. The style is very unusual and indicates a somewhat crude attempt at copying a genuine 1794 or 95 coin. The edge lettering is almost as crude as the rest of the piece, but generally one can make out parts of "*** FIFTY ** CENTS *** OR HALF ** A ** DOLLAR **." The weight is 204 grains which isn't so bad, considering that a genuine 1794 Half weighs in at 208 grains. The piece rings like a bell which makes one wonder of what it is made. The surface is covered with a lustrous coating which resembles dull silvering. This covering has adhered rather heavily around the stars and letters which gives a first impression of mint lustre. The reverse shows some evidence of a test mark, presumably by acid, which has left a small clean area. Careful examination does not permit any definite conclusions as to the composition, but I do feel that it is a base mixture with heavy traces of copper.

There is a story connected with this piece which is quite interesting. Oscar obtained it from an elderly man who claimed it was in his family for many years. It came wrapped in a piece of stained and yellowed paper which was beginning to crumble at the crease marks. The inside of this piece of paper, the part in contact with the coin, was covered with almost illegible writing. After some assistance from my wife, I made out the following:

LIMPSTEN (?) WEDNESDAY, MAY
19th 1813—THIS DAY REC'D OF JOHN
CRAM OF UNITY, ONE HALF DOLLAR
PIECE—OF THE UNITED STATES
COIN DATED 1787—AND INCLOSED
THE SAME WITHIN THIS PAPER—
FRANCIS CHASE & CHS (CHARLES)
WAY PRESENT AT THE TIME—

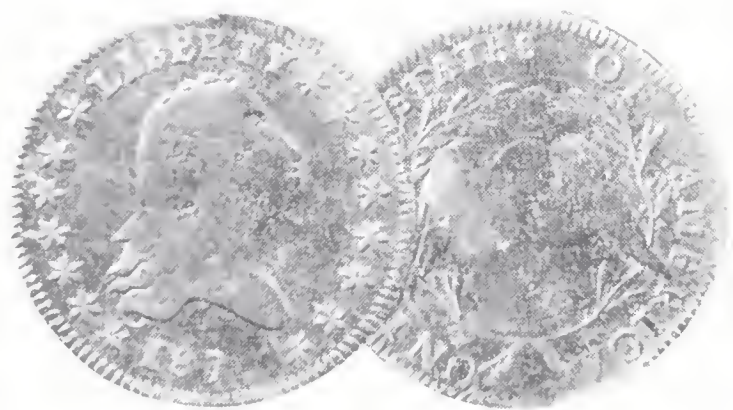

ATTEST—ABNER CHASE

The piece of paper, upon which the above was written, is approximately 3½ x 6". If it were not so torn and wrinkled, and if the brown ink were not so faded, I would attempt to reproduce the actual document here.

I have never heard of "Limpsten" (If that is the correct spelling) or "Unity" but presume that they are towns located somewhere in New England.

A few days after studying the above, I made my way to the American Numismatic Society. There, the able curator of medals, my good friend Dick Kenney, unearthed two coins quite similar to Mr. Schilke's piece.

187 HALF DOLLAR

One of them was really something. It, like the first piece, was struck from dies. The metal and edge lettering were almost identical. However, the die work was slightly different, even though the general fabric was highly comparable with Oscar's coin. This specimen, illustrated above, bears only part of a date, that being "187." The boys that cut this particular die probably intended to make the date 1787, but became confused with their figures. In any event, they struck coins from the uncompleted die and, judging from the wear on this piece, placed it quite successfully into circulation. This coin has a clear ring and is quite heavy at 205 grains.

1809 HALF DOLLAR

The third specimen closely follows the style of the first two even though the design is suggestive of the genuine halves coined from 1796 to 1807. This piece is also struck in some kind of a composition with traces of copper. It weighs 188 grains.

At the Society, someone suggested that these coins may have originated outside of the States, perhaps in Mexico. There is little doubt that they were intended to be anything but counterfeits. The idea that they were manufactured by foreigners seems logical as no sensible Yankee engaged in active competition with the U.S. Mint would so consistently misdate his coins. The document accompanying Mr. Schilke's coin proves that they circulated as Mr. Chase no doubt withdrew his piece from circulation due to its erratic appearance.

These three pieces closely resemble the German Silver or Feuchtwanger Metal frauds, dated in the late thirties, with the wrong edges and or designs. The latter are quite common and are often mistaken for Patterns by misinformed individuals.

NATIONALIST CHINA

With Formosa the last remaining outpost of the Kuomintang Government of Chiang Kai-Shek, it was to be expected that a coinage would soon be forthcoming. Communist China apparently is using paper money in quantity but no information has been received thus far regarding any coins.

The Nationalists' new coins maintain the obverse type of the pre-war regular issues featuring the bust of Dr. Sun Yat-Sen.

JORDAN

Under the currency law enacted in 1949, one Dinar (the new unit) equals one Pound sterling. The Dinar is divided into 1,000 Fils. Prepared from designs supplied by an Arab artist, the coins were struck at the Royal Mint in London. The alloys used for the new coins are the same as those used in the present British coinage.

Heretofore Jordan had a common currency with Palestine via the Palestine Currency Board, but since the end of British rule in Palestine and the subsequent establishment of the state of Israel, Jordan has seen fit to establish its own independent coinage and currency.

King Abdullah ibn Hussein of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan is the second son of the late King Hussein of the Hejaz and is the elder brother of the late King Feisal I of Iraq. Ruling as Amir of Transjordan since 1921, Abdullah assumed the title of King on May 25, 1946 after which a treaty signed with Britain recognized Jordan as a sovereign independent state. Transjordan officially changed its name to the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan on April 26, 1949.

BURMA

Information has come from the Burma Currency Board that as from July 20, 1950, new coins are being placed in circulation. Identical in size and shape to the coins of India, the new set consists of the Half and Quarter Rupee in pure nickel, and Two, One, and Half Annas in copper-nickel. Issued to the public in order to replace the current Indian coins now in circulation, the Burmese coins will be welcomed indeed by collectors and we hope to illustrate them in a forthcoming issue of the Journal.

MARKET TRENDS IN UNITED STATES COINS

CAPT. S. H. WOODWARD

In the face of general pessimism, due no doubt to the highly fluid international situation, it would be wise to carefully analyze the present and potential movement of the American numismatic market.

After several years of price reaction following the unprecedented demand for fine coins during world war II, we are again faced with a possible trend of unforeseen magnitude.

Regardless of how avid a collector may be, at some time or another he carefully debates the calculated risk of capital investment insofar as his numismatic expenditures are concerned. This is certainly true in times as doubtful as those we presently face.

Generally speaking, the coin market is strong, and as usual, this particularly applies to fine merchandise. The "Junk" of "Penny Board" caliber has its ups and downs, and at present is holding its own at least in reference to the demand initially created about eight years ago.

U.S. Gold coins of all types pose an interesting dilemma. The high prices of a few years ago are gone and may be considered out until new easy money appears upon the scene. Early eagles and half eagles, long popular, at present possess a transparent popularity in that they sell readily, but only at what seems to be a limited ceiling level. The individual who accumulates common U.S. Gold coins under the guise of a numismatist is not an actual collector and the dealer who panders to his whims is prostituting one of the finest hobbies in the world. Gold Dollars, in particular the scarcer mint marks, continue strong, and seem destined for a steady advance. Pioneer gold is perhaps as popular as any U.S. Gold coin, and, like the dollars, will continue to display increased strength. However, a word of caution is expressed in regard to fabulous premiums for the excessive rarities. Proof

Gold, the cream of date collecting, is as popular as ever, but the rarities will just not bring the prices commanded a few years ago.

Early and choice half cents are extremely difficult to locate, and when offered bring good prices. This series is yet to make its mark even though the last few years indicate some sort of a spontaneous interest. The late dates have risen in price, generally when in choice preservation. The rare proofs will prove good property if currently purchased carefully with an eye to quality and availability.

Large cents are in great demand as evidenced by the results obtained at a large, west coast mail sale held in November. The really popular items in this series are those which possess either rarity or quality or a combination of both. Dr. Sheldon's recently published work added new impetus to an already remarkable demand for die varieties of the years 1793-1814. It also pricked the balloon of "Fictitious Valuation" with a considerable decrease in the number of purchasers of rarities at ridiculous asking prices. Scarcity is the prima factor in the Cent market, but condition runs a close second. Any fine large cent is a good investment.

Collectors are beginning to awaken to the great scarcity of small cents, Eagle, Indian or Lincoln, in really choice condition. The market is actually saturated with dull, cleaned or doctored pieces. Bright, unsullied proof or uncirculated coins bring good prices and several dates are almost unobtainable. Second rate material will fall behind in value in this series as more and more collectors strive for quality.

Other minor coins are not overly popular, but uncirculated and proof pieces seem to be holding their own. This particularly applies to the "Tough" dates in the Two Cent, Three Cent

Nickel and Three Cent Silver series. A few coins, such as the 1887 Three Cents Nickel have risen sharply in demand and price, but such items were underpriced to begin with.

The earlier Five Cent Nickels have dropped somewhat in popularity, but they still retain a good percentage of their war time records. Buffalo Nickels become better property every day, and several dates in choice uncirculated condition are almost unobtainable.

The Silver series, with the exception of Half Dimes and Dollars, all display the same characteristics. Early Dimes, Quarters and Halves are rapidly rising in price as the demand for these pieces increases. Late Silver, particularly the Barber Dimes, Quarters and Halves show unusual power and the rarer mint marks have yet to reach their full potential value. The coins struck after 1916 and prior to 1935 are one of the strongest U.S. series and choice, sharp Uncirculated coins are becoming very difficult to find. Half Dimes remain comparatively static with the exception of the earlier dates.

Silver Dollars, prior to 1878, have only begun to move upwards. Early pieces, 1794 to 1803, will prove a strong investment as more and more collectors display an interest in die varieties. M. H. Bolender's book on this series has not as yet fully caught on, but in the near future will become the bible of the variety happy early dollar collector. Every Liberty seated dollar has become scarce, and the rarer dates and mint marks seem to be slowly rising in value. The Morgan and Peace Dollars are still completely unpredictable and none of them are a wise investment. The exception to this rule is of course the Morgan Proofs. Trade Dollars are very, very slowly coming into their own. Several dates and mint marks seem to have a strong future.

If Silver Commemoratives are now the barometer of the coin market, values are definitely moving upward. In this instance, price is strictly a distribution and demand factor, and on that basis, Commemoratives are a good investment. The careful collector should examine his coins closely as several are showing the ill effects of repeated handling.

Gold Commemoratives have yet to recover from the "Cornered Market" reputation they acquired a few years back. Unless bought right, this series shows little future.

The bloom has rapidly disappeared from the roll collecting flower, and many hoarders are breaking up their holdings. It became obvious to many people at once that any coin offered in roll quantities could never be rare.

Large United States Paper Currency, as well as odd items such as the "So-Called" Dollars, are in great demand. The former will no doubt prove to be fine investment material if condition is a prime factor when purchasing.

The interest in Confederate, State, and Obsolete Paper, as well as Colonial Notes and Fractional Currency, remains limited. However, large lots of this material, available in former years, cannot be found on today's market.

Indications of an awakening interest in Hard Times Tokens, Store Cards and Washingtonia, as well as Early American Medals, can be seen, and these series seem liable for a strong comeback and are recommended to the intelligent collector.

Early American coins, with the exception of the great rarities, presently show more power than they have at any time in the last decade. The "Junior Rarities" in the Colonial series have not only showed firmness, but in a number of instances have recently set record prices. This was adequately proven at a recent New York sale where floor bidding for Colonials was unusually active. The following prices certainly prove this point. Continental Pewter Dollars, 1776 Uncirculated @ $75 and $85; Another, CURRENCY, VF @ $57.50; 1783 Maryland Shilling, Fine

@ $25, Three-pence, VF @ $72.50; 1790 Standish Barry Threepence, VF, but badly off center @ $62.50; A Lord Baltimore Shilling, Fine but somewhat impaired @ $115, Sixpence, Fine, but slightly bent @ $80; The New York Theater Penny in the usual semi-proof condition @ $85; Kentucky Myddleton Penny in Copper @ $42.50; Kentucky (1790) Cent, Plain edge, Uncirculated @ $6.50, Another, VF @ $8.00. Two pieces with lettered edges brought $7.00 each in Unc. condition. Carolina Elephant Token, Good @ $45; London Elephant Token, Fine @ $6.50. The Vermont Cent muled with the Immune Columbia reverse, Good with a badly cracked planchet, @ $95; 1785 VERMONTIS, VG @ $20; 1786 Vermont Baby Head, Fine @ $15.00. A 1787 N.Y. EXCELSIOR Cent, Fine but somewhat damaged @ $75, Another, the eagle facing right, about Good @ $47.50. Two Bar Cents, both VF @ $10.50 and $11; Fugio Cent, Restrike, EF @ $4.50, Another, STATES UNITED, VG, 2 Pcs. @ $4.50 for the pair. (All of the Fugio Cents offered sold on the floor.) The (1792) General of the American Armies, etc., Washington Cent, VF @ $60; Rhode Island Token in Pewter, VF @ $14; A holed and just readable Higley Copper @ $35, another, the Broad Axe variety, eroded and only Good @ $75.00.

Colonials are coming back through the medium of the lower price items. The great rarities will be the last coins to feel the demand, but they in time will again come into their own.

It is quite obvious that inflation to a marked degree is with us and every indication is that it will become worse. It is responsible for the general increase in coin values and as we have greater inflation, prices will continue to move upward. On the other hand, the same inflation that raises numismatic valuations and prices, also increases interest in our hobby and thereby creates new collectors.

As the number of serious and active collectors grows, the limited amount of quality items available will be absorbed which should tend to hold inflated values when our currency and general economic picture gradually returns to normal. Therefore, when we make an analysis of today's prices relative to future values, we must consider not only current inflation, but the realization that American numismatics is still in it's infancy. The trend is towards a strong market with fine material widely distributed. There are very few commodities that offer the investment potential of good numismatic property and which do not have the stigma of a highly fluctuating market.
